757-446-6156

Sara Rothenberg joined CINCH as the Assistant Director and an Instructor of Pediatrics at Eastern Virginia Medical School in 2017. Sara has developed extensive early-career experience in health policy in Washington, D.C. as a project manager and senior researcher for the George Washington University. Her work has focused on health and access disparities in medically underserved populations. She has collaborated with diverse groups of stakeholders around Medicaid expansion and national health reform, developing issue briefs and policy analyses for such organizations as The Commonwealth Fund. Originally from upstate New York, Sara has continued to pursue her passion for public health with a focus on prevention, health promotion, and targeted community initiatives.

Sara holds a Bachelor's degree in Health, Behavior, and Society from the University of Rochester, and a Master of Public Health from the George Washington University.
